

Acceptable Use Policy

Last updated: November 8th, 2018

Presq is a place that empowers people to share and grow the world's knowledge. We believe if people don't feel safe they can't contribute to knowledge or listen to another person's point of view. The following rules help everyone on Presq have a safe experience

Be Nice, Be Respectful

Follow Presq's Be Nice, Be Respectful policy ("BNBR"), which includes the following:

Engage with Others in a Constructive Way

Assume everyone on Presq is here to make the platform a great resource with diverse backgrounds, beliefs, and opinions. It is OK to disagree, but please be civil, respectful, and considerate to other posters.

No Hate Speech

Presq is a place for civil discourse and does not tolerate content that attacks or disparages an individual or group based on race, gender, religion, nationality, ethnicity, political group, sexual orientation or another similar characteristic. Any generalizations about these topics should be phrased as neutrally as possible.

No Harassment and Bullying

Abusive behavior directed towards private individuals is not allowed. Repeated and unwanted contact constitutes a form of harassment. Content should not make threats against others or advocate violence, including self-harm.

Respect the Rights of Others

Identity and Deceptive Activity

Your Presq profile should use your real name or legally incorporated business name and use accurate and truthful credentials. Do not use Presq to impersonate another person, act as another entity without authorization, or create multiple accounts.

Intellectual Property and Personal Rights

Do not post content that infringes any intellectual property or personal right of another party. Writing taken from another source should be properly attributed and block quoted.

Respect the Presq Platform

No Spam

Do not use Presq to post or attract spam.

No Malicious or Illegal Activity

Do not contribute viruses, malware, and other malicious programs or engage in activity that harms or interferes with the operation of Presq or seeks to circumvent security or authentication measures. Do not use Presq to engage in unlawful activity or to promote illegal acts.

Abide by Other Presq Policies

Follow Presq's other policies, which Presq may add or change from time to time.

Reporting Problems

If you see something on Presq that you believe violates our guidelines or policies, please report it to us by sending mail to enquiry@Presq.com.

Violating the Acceptable Use Policy may result in the removal of content, or in the limitation or termination of a user's access to Presq.

Response that copy or paraphrase content from other sources should:

- Explicitly attribute the source. If the source is online, the answer should include a link to the page where the content can be found. If the source is a physical source (like a book), the answer should include a citation.

- Clearly indicate which portions of the text are copied from another source. Format using quotes, or otherwise visually indicate which portions are taken from elsewhere. Presq's strong preference is for people to use Presq's formatting for long excerpts. If you are republishing your own content from another site you may omit formatting and cite the original publication at the end of your answer.

Answers that plagiarize content from other sources will be collapsed. Note that repeatedly posting the same answer to multiple questions will be considered spam, particularly if the answer isn't customized for the question.

Other content

Topic descriptions, answer wikis, and other similar community-editable descriptions on Presq should be predominantly original and should not copy-and-paste from other sites (e.g., Wikipedia).

Plagiarizing content is considered a serious policy violation on Presq and will be treated as such in considering moderation action against writers who violate the policy. We will ban people who violate this policy repeatedly.